OVERVIEW

Jeff Gray is an attorney focusing his practice on a wide array of commercial litigation matters including banking, construction, and investment and securities industry disputes.

Jeff has a career long record of taking cases to trial before juries, judges and arbitrators. Jeff's extensive trial experience is varied in both case type and geographic location. This wide ranging advocacy experience proves invaluable to clients who are faced with complex, high stakes, and/or "bet the company" disputes.

Jeff is a former securities arbitrator and panel chair with the NASD (now FINRA) and he has lectured at numerous state and local bar association and industry seminars on damages, financial services and litigation issues.

REPRESENTATIVE CASES & TRANSACTIONS

- Led a trial team defending complex questions of insurance coverage for whistleblower claims and a resulting multimillion dollar government settlement. The matter was successfully resolved shortly before the jury trial began, which would have focused on the question of government contracts fraud by the insured/adverse party.

- Successfully resolved a $65 million professional liability claim against an insurance broker by a customer alleging deliberate underinsurance following a catastrophic loss.
- Represented a bank purchaser of failed financial institution assets, totaling roughly $500 million, in resolving its most challenging credits. The bank received accolades from the FDIC regarding its efficient and cost-effective performance under the FDIC's "Loss Share Program."
- Resolved congressional and FDIC inquiries into a bank's loan workout and collection practices, resulting in no action against the financial institution.
- Litigated and resolved numerous "business divorce" cases involving, for example, manufacturing, importing, hospitality and a medical practice.
